Week 3 Tues. Notes

Remember the 3 C's Always when asking questions.

* What is diamond trying to convince you with the story of Maori and Moriori

That conflict happened in pages before ~~the~~ the ones we were assigned

* Polynesian Experiment

As you get more agriculture there is surplus food.

This surplus spikes population and that in turn gives us more people to revolutionize our societies. More technologies can come about.

Agriculture could be good for many reasons, but there were also bad things that come about too. So now there was inequality and slavery was about to form or had formed.

* What prompted agriculture?

Some areas could handle agriculture, some did not so some of it had to do with the environment. ~~was~~

Conquering didn't necessarily mean extinguishing another culture.

* What are social consequences of stored food?

Sustained the military during war so they could focus on war.

Need to have people to defend a surplus.

Some were able to be thinkers and not have to worry about food, so this sped up technology.

Food could be used as a currency or commodity.

People could be full time professionals because they didn't have to worry about food.

Drawbacks - Comparing

so many good things happened but there were many not so great things either

~~There~~ There was a class difference developing.

Slavery developed
Diseases developed.
